time a mortgage on the land, to secure the remaining $2000. Supposing in that case, that at the end of ten months, Ruggles & Co., had made an absolute conveyance of fifty acres of the land to Goodale, in payment of their debt to him of $2000, Hardy's mortgage having been duly recorded, could it be successfully contended that such a conveyance would, or ought in justice to be allowed to defeat the lien of the mortgagee! If, in the case before me, Mr. Goodale was content to rely upon the bare personal credit of Ruggles & Co., while Dr. Hardy secured himself by obtaining a mortgage upon their stock of goods, surely the latter must be allowed to reap the benefit of his superior prudence. In the course of the argument of this cause, great stress has been laid by counsel for the defendants, upon the stipulation in the mortgage which allowed the mortgagors to carry on their stocked and to remark the soberness, propriety, and harmony which animate the general interport of the general interport of the general interporting and to remark the soberness, propriety, and harmony which animate the general interport of the mortgage and the remarks of the mortgage of the Polymeria, the numerous dialects of China and India, the newly discovered longues of Africa, and those of the mortgage of the Polymeria, the numerous dialects of the last evening of the capture of the argument of this capture. But, the fact must not be overlooked, that this permission to sell was allowed to the mortgagors, for the very purpose of enabling them to carry on their business, for the mutual benefit of both parties, and on the express condition that they would replace old stock with new. Whether or would replace old stock with new. Whether or the salubrity of this climate, the ease of access compared with the voyage to the Atlantic States, and its high educational and not shing creditor, it was, and might well be deemed. not such a condition would avail as against an attaching creditor, it was, and might well be deemed valid by the parties to the mortgage. It has been contended that if the Court should uphold this mortgage, as against the conveyances to Field and Goodale, the mortgagee might with equal propriety ask us to declare void, every sale made by Rugles & Co., since the date of the mortgage. It has been desirable places in the Pacific to which American, English and other places in the Pacific to which American places in the Pacific to which American, English and other places in the Pacific to which American places in the Pacifi This appears to me an unsound argument, because in the empires of the sun-rising on the other shore, of this This appears to me an unsound argument, occase, and in the events whose vast shadows are beginit is equivalent to saying that the mortgagors ning to loom up and to be cast over its waters. could not make a valid sale at all, which is clearly incorrect. . Every sale made by the mortgagors in accordance with the terms of the mortgage is good. Parties who purchased portions of the mortgaged goods from Ruggles & Co., in the ordinary course of their business, and paid for such goods, were not obliged to see that Ruggles & Co., applied the proceeds in strict accordance with the terms of the mortgage, because, to that extent, Hardy trusted MARINE JOURNAL. to the personal good faith of the mortgagors; but, it was incumbent upon third parties, at least to refrain from interfering directly with the mortgagee's security, by taking assignments of the stock in satisfaction of their unsecured claims. The May 25.—Brit. bq. Avoca, Stone; 254 tns. 35 ds. fm. Callae 30.—Am. sh. S. S. Bishop, Lindsey, fm. Lahaina. rale would seem to apply here with force, "that particular persons, in contracts and other acts, May 30 .- Am. bq. Avoca, Stone, for Hong Kong shall not only transact bona fide between themselves but shall not transact mala fide in respect to other persons, who stand in such a relation to either, as to be affected by the contract or the consequences of it." Story's Eq. Jur. Vol. 1, Sec. 333. In order to uphold the conveyances made to Messrs. Field and Goodale, it is necessary that those conveyances should appear, not only to have been made for a valuable consideration, but also in accordance with the terms of the mortgage, under which it is claimed that Ruggles & Co. had a right to dispose of the goods. If either of these two requisites are wanting, the conveyances cannot be upheld. I have already stated my opinion that neither of them were consistent with the terms of the mortgage, if they included goods covered by it, and ought therefore, to that extent, to be set aside. It is unnecessary to decide upon the question whether or not, Messrs. Field and Goodale were purchasers for a valuable consideration. The next question is, if the conveyances to Messrs. Field and Goodale are to be held void only so far as they include goods covered by the mortgage, how shall it be ascertained what portion of the goods stand in that category, and what portion do not! There is evidence already to show that the goods transferred to Field consist, to a considerable extent of a part of the same goods for which Ruggles & Co., are said to be indebted to his prin-Goodale, on the contrary, I understand that the drew Ohlson, in the But the evidence now on record does not show precisely what part of the goods conveyed to either. are of the original stock, and what part are new An opportunity to adduce evidence for that purpose, must be afforded before a final decree is made in the cause. The question is upon whom does the onus lie of producing such evidence! Were 2,500 ACRES of Land on East the onus lie of producing such evidence! Were this the familiar case of a party who wilfully or ner's Plantation, suitable for Grazing or negligently, suffered his goods to remain in the Planting. This land will be sold or leased possession of, and mixed up with the goods of another, till they were attached by the sheriff on legal process, the question would admit of but one answer, for, in that case, the party claiming must identify his goods if he would save them. Or, if in this case, the goods had been so attached, the mertgagee would be required to identify the particular goods upon which he claims to have a lien, being allowed a fair opportunity so to do. But, the circumstances of this case are otherwise. The goods upon which Hardy claims to have a lien, were left in the possession and under the control of the mortgagors, to be dealt with in good faith, pursuant to an agreement made for the mutual benefit of the parties, of which agreement Messrs Field and Goodale had constructive notice. In opposition to that agreement the mortgagors have, with the assistance of Messrs. Field and Goodale, divested themselves of the possession of the goods, in a rights of the mortgagee, without his consent. The conveyances made to Messrs. Field and Goodale, can be upheld only so far as to bind goods not covnot the mortgagee, should produce the evidence necessary to sustain those conveyances to the extent indicated. It seems to me that to hold otherwise, would be to place the mortgagee at a disadvantage, not through any negligence or fault on his part, but through the wrongful act of the other parties. It would be peculiarly hard, under the circumstances of this case, to require the mortgagee to produce the evidence necessary to sustain a conveyance made in contravention of his rights. The mortgagors are, probably, the only parties who can and what are not. Messrs. Field & Goodale may rances deposee au Consulat. fairly call upon them to produce all the evidence in their power, in support of the conveyances they have made. A reasonable time will be allowed for that purpose, and should Messrs. Field and Goodale fail to produce evidence, or decline to do so, the court will then take such further action in the oremises as may seem just and right.
